A DESIRABLE PREMIUM

In making choice of a premium for their weekly for season 1901-02 the Free Press, Winnipeg, have secured something quite out of the ordinary. Consideration of the value to the farmers of Western Canada of an accurate thermometer and a reliable barometer led to negotiations with the largest makers of observatory instruments and appliances in America, and as a result of those negotiations there has been obtained a large number of accurate and reliable combined thermometers and barometers, which have been tested carefully, after being made especially to suit the extremes of climate met with in this country. The barometer is guaranteed to indicate atmospheric changes correctly and the thermometer to register temperatures down to 50 degrees below zero.

These handsome instruments, indispensable in every home in Western Canada, will be sent free to any person forwarding $1.00 for the Weekly Free Press.

A Magnificent Country.

Homestead inspector A. G. Harrison has returned from a buckboard trip through the country along the C. & E. line as far south as Ponoka and thence east. The journey was a lengthy one, occupying about three weeks, and covered a magnificent stretch of country. The points touched on along the railway line were Leduc, Wetaskiwin, Holbrook and Ponoka. From this point Mr. Harrison turned east to Asker and Red Deer lake settlements, thence to Lewisville northeast and to the Dried Meat lake and Battle river countries.

Dried Meat lake lies 25 miles east of Wetaskiwin. It is really an enlargement of the Battle river which flows through it. The lake is a mile wide and twenty miles long and is one of the finest bodies of water in the country. It lies among low rolling hills, from which creeks and gullies head. Its banks are low and grassy, edged with a sandy beach. The water is pure and clear. Game abounds both on the lake and in the adjacent country, making it unsurpassed as a camping and shooting ground. The advantages of the lake have not been over looked as all the land around it, both government and C. P. R., has been taken up by homeseekers and settlement is now pushing out to the country eastward. About thirty miles east of Dried Meat lake lies Wavey lake, so called on account of the number of birds of that name who make it their feeding and breeding ground. This lake and its surrounding country are said to equal if not surpass the district around Dried Meat lake. It is in this direction that settlement is now reaching out and undoubtedly in a year or two this district will be as thickly populated as that nearer the railway line. This country, it is anticipated, will be shortly opened up by a branch of the C. P. R. running from the main line and tapping the C. & E. about Hobbema or Wetaskiwin. If this were done a magnificent country, second to none in the west, would be opened up to settlement. It compares largely with the Vermillion country which it lies almost south of. On his return journey Mr. Harrison met party after party of delegates and homeseekers going into the country to select homes for themselves. Great advance has taken place in the settlement of all the country along the C. & E. in fact so much has the district attracted attention that speculators have bought up and are holding a great deal of C. P. R. land. This practice has become so pronounced that the settlers in some of the localities were holding a meeting to memorialize the government regarding the imposition of a special tax on non-resident speculators who buy and hold land simply to profit by the industry of the resident landowner.

Every farmer and stock raiser in the country seemed to be doing well. Many went into stock and large herds of 100 or more could be seen feeding on the hill sides. The crop was in much the same condition as that further north. Some was being harvested, some stacked and some threshed. One settler last year had 1300 bushels of oats which he sold for 45c a bushel. This year he will have some 2300 which he calculates to sell at about the same figure to the new comers settling around him. This man came into the country a few years ago with no capital and no possessions except a team and a plow. He now has a largely stocked farm, 30 or 40 head of cattle and horses in great number. Oats in the district, Mr. Harrison says, run from 100 to 120 bushels to the acre by measure and more by weight. The soil is heavy loam with some sand.—Bulletin.

To Correspondents

We are very grateful to our correspondents for their efforts in sending us in the news of their respective districts. But now that the busy season is almost over, we request that they send in their budgets regularly, as we desire to hear from every vicinity in the district. We want the news. We would be pleased to send the usual correspondent's outfit to anyone in a district not already represented. It not only helps the paper, but is a good advertisement for the locality. Send in the news and help us make The Times the best paper in the west.

Little Beaver Chips.

Fine weather in this locality and farm work is progressing nicely. Fall plowing is well ahead. John Hass and Will Barry, of Wasan, Neb., and John Sutton, of Bloomfield, Neb., were land seekers in this vicinity last week and seemed well pleased with the country. Mr and Mrs Hoult made a trip to Wetaskiwin last week. Joe Bombard has accepted a job as thresher with Mr. Townsend, and thinks he can keep his face dirty if he doesn't do anything else. Mr and Mrs. Eli DeFrain were visiting Mr. Hansen of Red Deer Lake last week. Emil Edstrom and Mr. Ram were callers at Eli DeFrain's on Sunday and enjoyed a fine visit. Charlie Anderson returned home Saturday night, where he intends remaining for some time. Ed. Mitchell and Joe Bombard are dehorning cattle now and are doing a rushing business.

Get The Best.

Certainly the most lifelike portraits of the King Queen are those offered this year by the Family Herald and Weekly Star, of Montreal, to their subscribers, and what is the use having anything but the best. The Family Herald portraits are each 18x24 inches, and are perfect likenesses. The Family Herald's portraits have also the distinguished merit of being the very first taken after the King's accession to the throne, and have, therefore, an historical value that no other portraits will possess. When one gets the best at the same price as an inferior article, there should be no time lost in choosing, and certainly the Family Herald's pictures of the King and Queen are beyond comparison with any others before the public.

In addition to these 2 portraits, each subscriber receives, we understand, a perfect copy of the renowned Gainsborough picture, the Duchess of Devonshire, 22 x 28 inches, in ten beautiful colours. It is pronounced a perfect gem.

All three pictures and a year's subscription to the Family Herald and Weekly Star for one year is the dollars worth of the season.

Millet.

Mr. Clore has moved onto his homestead.

Mr. Wright is having his house moved across the track.

Mrs. Black had a horse severely cut this week on a barbed wire fence.

Mrs. Bean and family left for Lethbridge on Wednesday morning's train.

The population of Millet was increased last week by three Scandinavian families from Minnesota.

Mr. Mullen is building a dwelling house on the town site. This building will be quite an acquisition to Millet, and will improve the appearance of the town.

Mr. Trouse has moved to Wetaskiwin, where he intends opening up a tailor shop. We understand Mr. Trouse was cutter and fitter for a large clothing house in Ottawa, Ont., and is a good mechanic.

Auburn, N. Y., Oct. 29.—7:12:30 o'clock this morning Leon F. Czolgosz, murderer of President McKinley, paid the extreme penalty enacted by the law for his crime. He was shocked to death by 1700 volts of electricity.

Love Finds A Way.

By Jeannette H. Walworth

"In that letter"—a bitter curve marred the corners of his mouth for a second—"you said your 'No' was final. It must stand at that. If I have been brutally plain, it is because there must not be the possibility of any misunderstanding between us in the future. The negative of years ago cannot by any sophistry be turned into an affirmative of today."

He stood up and held out his hand. She made no response. Her hot cheeks were buried in the cushions of the sofa. Only the coil of her golden hair was turned toward him. He left her so. He thought of her tenderly as the dying landscape shot past the window of the car that was bearing him away from her.

Now that she had done all in her power to obey her father's command she would feel at liberty to recall the man she loved. Ah, well! That was just as it should be, but she would never know what it had cost him to give her up a second time.

CHAPTER XIX.

"AND THE WHOLE WIDE OCEAN BETWEEN US!"

At a foreign resort where her shy, untraveled ways subjected her to unfriendly comment and all of her most cherished domestic traditions were violently set at naught Miss Malvina necessarily experienced the desolate sensations of a cat in a strange garret.

Olivia had a much better time of it. She was seen to be beautiful and said to be wealthy, a combination which makes for popularity anywhere and everywhere. Nice promptly put itself under her feet. Poor Miss Malvina was seen to be not beautiful and in her capacity as Miss Matthews' companion proclaimed herself not wealthy. She was under Nice's feet. Never was meeker or more acquiescent chaperon. She was devoted to her charge, and so long as Ollie would not be sensible and marry Tom Broxton she supposed one ought to rejoice over the multiplicity of newer adorers, from whom the fastidious little lady had a chance to select a second best.

To loyal Miss Malvina any man would be second best to Tom, but through all her single hearted devotion to Ollie's interests there ran an undercurrent of homesickness which it was hard to conceal. She longed for Mandeville-on-the-Moore, dull old Mandeville—with an exceedingly great yearning. The Mandeville Morning News, an aspiring sheet, at which she had often pointed the finger of scorn when she was at home, was her one solace on foreign soil. Its coming filled her day with light.

Coming in from an afternoon drive one day, flower laden and smiling, Olivia found her dampening this cherished sheet with copious tears. Flowers and all, she twined affectionate arms about her faithful friend's neck.

"You are homesick, and I am torturing the life out of you. Nice is not doing you one particle of good. We will start home tomorrow. I have been having such a lovely time I have grown selfish, but we will start right straight home."

"We will do nothing of the kind, my dear. Nice has cured my cough continually—that is, almost. I was crying just a few tears, but it was for Tom, poor, dear Tom!"

Olivia flushed resentfully. "Tom Broxton?"

"Yes. I do feel so sorry for him."

Ollie walked over to a distant table and busied herself putting her flowers in water.

"Your tears must flow readily, Malvina. Every one says he is getting on splendidly; that he will be a rich man before he is 30. And—then—I have made my will. He is to have everything I leave."

Miss Malvina was turning the damp paper about in search of something. She sniffed scornfully.

"You ridiculous child! You 'leave'? I don't think Tom Broxton cares a copper for money for its own sake. He said to me once, quite confidentially, of course, that when he had hoped to marry you he had thought the wealth of Golconda too slight. But Tom has had so much trouble in his short life, and now comes this."

"And now comes what?"

Olivia wheeled suddenly, showing a very pale face and eyes full of fright. Miss Malvina held out the paper folded in a long strip.

"It is dreadfully hard to find a paragraph once you let it go."

"Is it about Tom?"

"Yes, or at least it is about"—

"Read it aloud, please."

And Miss Malvina read:

"That fine old piece of real estate known as Broxton Hall, on the outskirts of town, has again changed hands. It is said that Mrs. Westwood's health demands a permanent residence in a warmer climate. Some mystery seems to attach to the recent transfer, and no amount of reportorial enterprise has enabled us to secure the name of its owner. Extensive repairs on the house and grounds are already under way."

"Well," said Olivia, biting off a rose stem with strong white teeth, "what that all has to do with your bedewing the morning paper with tears has yet to be explained."

"Why, Tom, you see, he told me—you know he and I had quite a little talk after you had sent him away in such a hurry that Sunday—that when he had expected you and Mr. Westover to live at the old place he had become reconciled to give it up, as he certainly never could have lived there by himself, but if time should prove that you and Clarence were not to adjust your little difference he should buy back the old place himself."

"And how do you know he is not the new owner?"

"Oh, I don't think there would be so much mystery about it if he were. Tom isn't the man to want to do anything sensational."

"Was he so very fond of the place?"

"Ollie, you know as well as I do that he loves that old house better than he does anything on earth. Not"—quickly seeking to repair any probable hurt —"that he blamed your dear papa for letting it go. I do wish I knew who this mysterious purchaser is."

"I can relieve you to that extent," said Ollie, swooping down upon the paper and hiding behind it. "I have bought Broxton Hall."

"You, Olivia?"

"At least my business man has for me. I told him before we left America to buy it at any price I could afford to pay if Mr. Westover would sell."

"Wasn't that a little reckless, dear? It is a beautiful old place undoubtedly, and I do believe Thomas would rather think of it as belonging to you than anybody in the world."

Ollie's temples showed pink above the Mandeville Morning News. "Of course I did not buy it to live in. That would be absurd. I bought it for Tom. I want Tom to live in it with his wife when he gets one. But now that it is mine I don't know how to give it to him unless I die and leave it to him in my will."

Miss Malvina looked at her gravely. "I am quite sure he would not like to get it that way, my dear."

"And I am sure I should not like him to get it that way, at least not immediately."

She laughed hysterically. Miss Malvina's literalness often gave her cause for mirth. She flung herself into a chair to read that paragraph about Broxton Hall for herself. There was a certain zest in the idea that all Mandeville was trying to guess her secret and a deeper sort of satisfaction in the reflection that no one could ever again come between Tom and the old place after she should have given it back to him.

Dear old Tom! Some time, somehow, he should come into his own again.

Miss Malvina glanced at her confiscated paper enviously. She had but just begun upon the "Local Brevities" when Olivia had entered.

"Would you mind turning to 'Deaths' and 'Marriages,' dear, and reading them out? I had just got to them."

Olivia ran glibly through the mortuary and hymeneal reports.

"And now the casualties of the day." "Where do you find them? Oh, yes, here! Why"—with a sharp cry she looked over the paper at Miss Malvina—"had you seen it and left me to stumble on it for myself?"

"Had I seen what, child?"

"About Tom! Tom! He is hurt, badly hurt. Oh, Miss Malvina, listen! 'News reached this office late last evening by telegraph that Mr. Thomas Broxton, our highly esteemed ex-townsman, has been seriously injured in an accident to the Electric Light works in Kansas City, of which he has recently been made general superintendent. The account of his accident as we have received it makes quite a hero of Mr. Broxton and shows him to be the gallant son of a noble gentleman. It was by endeavoring to save the life of an old, crippled employee of the works, who was engaged on the top floor, that he came near losing his own valuable life.'"

Olivia flung the paper down with a moan. "And the whole wide ocean between us! My love! My love!"

Miss Malvina was sobbing helplessly. Olivia sprang to her feet passionately.

"Don't let us waste time crying, Miss Malvina. Help me to pack up. Help me to get ready. We will start home tomorrow. We will go to him. Oh, Tom, Tom! Why did I let you drive me away from you?"

"Olivia! Tom Broxton drive you away from him?"

"Yes, he did, he did! I asked him—to—have me—and he refused! Yes, he did!"

She was wringing her hands in an agony of tearless distress.

"Olivia!"

"Oh, please don't keep repeating my name for all the world like a parrot, Miss Malvina!"

"Why, the boy is perfectly wrapped up in you!"

"He isn't, he isn't! He despises me, and I—I love him! I have loved him all my life, and—and I did not know it. He was so meek and lowly that I tyrannized over him. Oh, to think of the miles of salt water between us and him! Who knows? Suppose"— She turned white to the very lips.

Miss Malvina, frightened at the storm raised by The Morning News, mendaciously cast discredit on it and its methods.

"But, my dear Olivia, you are working yourself up into a perfect fever so unnecessarily. Don't you know the newspapers never tell the truth? They can't afford to. They have to spread every sensation out so thin, to make it cover so much space, that you would see right through it if they didn't color it up high and smear it all over with manufactured features. Now, I don't doubt for a moment that Tom Broxton's legs have done double duty in that paragraph as well as on that fire escape."

"He is none the less a hero, a great, brave fellow," said Ollie, brightening into combativeness under this comforting view of the case.

"Of course he is, and no one knows it better than I do. Suppose we send a cablegram to ask about him."

"I am going straight to him." said Ollie, with lofty superiority to all lets and hindrances.

"But if no vessel should be sailing immediately, my dear?"

"Oh, Miss Malvina, please get to packing our trunks! You are such a creature for pointing out obstacles."

Whether Miss Malvina's meek spirit would have held good under this fresh outburst of injustice will never be known. Some one knocked at the door of their apartment. Ollie, feverishly anxious to be doing something, answered it herself.

"You? Why?"—

She moved back from the door, and Clarence Westover entered, holding a newspaper in his hand.

"I am awfully glad to find you in. I am just back from Berlin; found a lot of mail matter waiting for me, this among it."

"I know—we know," said Olivia, nodding her head slowly.

"It's about Broxton, I mean," Clarence said.

"Yes; we have seen it."

Westover's handsome face was wrinkled with perplexity. He found himself in rather an awkward predicament. He had come to plead Tom Broxton's cause with the woman they had both loved.

"It is an awful pity," he said, glancing at the paper he still held. "There are not many men like Broxton in the world."

"Not a single one," Miss Malvina interjected, with decision.

"I thought perhaps—you might—You see, I feel deucedly officious."

"Miss Malvina and I are starting for America immediately," said Ollie, with blushing dignity.

"Good! The sooner the better! But I don't know of any vessel that sails sooner than the one I have taken passage by. That goes on Wednesday. This is Monday."

"You?"

Westover looked at her meditatively. A demure smile lurked in the corners of his mouth. How desperately in love with this pretty little thing he had once fancied himself! But that was before he had met his Clementine, whom he had married a week before in Venice.

"Yes, my wife and I sail for America on Wednesday," he said quietly.

"Your wife! I—we had heard that"—

"I hope you will like her, Ollie."

"I know I shall adore her, Clarence."

"You see," he went on maliciously, "after you made up your mind that you would never, never marry anybody, I felt it a duty I owed myself to fall in love with somebody else."

Ollie treated him to one of her most patronizing nods. "You did quite right. I hope you will always stand up as well to your sense of duty. I am so glad. As for me, I shall never marry."

"Of course not. Consistency forbids, and a woman is nothing if not consistent."

"Miss Malvina and I have been having a perfectly lovely time this winter." She beat her head to pin a rose in her belt.

"Miss Malvina especially, doubtless," said Clarence, laughing gayly. "Shall I secure berths for Wednesday's boat for you?"

"If you would."

A little while later she stood in a window watching him cross the wide plaza upon which her apartment fronted. She had never found him so handsome nor so lovable. She turned toward Miss Malvina, who was recklessly emptying the entire contents of the writing table into a pillowslip.

"He is very handsome."

"Who? Tom?"

"No; Clarence."

"Yes; he is good looking enough. But, Olivia"—

"He has a wife, you dear old simpleton! Let that suffice to allay your fears. But, Miss Malvina, all this has set me to wondering about myself. Am I, after all, just a commonplace, changeable creature who never will know her own mind? What made me think myself so dreadfully in love with Clarence Westover a year or two ago? And now I know my heart will break if anything happens to Tom."

"Oh, I don't know! Clarence was worldly-wise and sawy, and you never had been courted before. His masterful ways and strong will dazzled you. My dear, splendid Tom treated you as if you were a queen. He abased himself before you, and so you exalted yourself unduly."

Ollie flashed a bright smile at her, and, coming over to the trunk into which things were being pitched as if the steamer were waiting for that particular piece of baggage, she put both hands on the thin spinster shoulders.

"Well?"

"You are the wisest woman in the world. I am so much obliged to you for explaining me to myself. I hate to be inconsistent. After all, Tom is to blame for everything. He shouldn't have such a meek—"

From 240 acres of land Mr. L. Kiel, of Lumsden, Assa., has threshed 8,400 bushels of wheat, 3,000 bushels of oats and 65 bushels of rye.

Wheat growing on October 15 is not a very usual occurrence in Manitoba, yet Mr. M. A. Dean has fall wheat growing now and up over four inches. Tommy is ready to vouch for this.—MacGregor Herald.

PICTURESQUE PARLIAMENTARY CANDIDATE IN ENGLAND.

He Is to Run, Probably in Mid-Gloucestershire, in "the Jacobite Interest"—Count de Sigri Claims Direct Descent From "Bonnie Prince Charlie"—Favorite Dress That of His Famed Ancestor

It is said that Count de Sigri—"Count of the Roman Empire" — will at the next opportunity contest a seat in Parliament on behalf of the "Jacobite party"—Mid-Gloucestershire being the probable scene of the electoral strife.

Count de Sigri is a picturesque and interesting figure in Gloucestershire. He claims direct lineal descent on the distaff side from "Bonnie Prince Charlie." His house at Westend, Eastington, a considerable village six miles east of the city of Gloucester, is furnished throughout with black oak furniture, all family heirlooms of the Stuart dynasty. He possesses a bed which belonged to Prince Charlie, and is said to attend worship daily at the same private chapel used by that prince. The count's favorite costume is like that worn by Prince Charlie when at the head of his Highlanders, and upon the occasion of any village feast or festival he goes forth in Stuart tartans, with halberdiers, sword bearer, page, and standard bearers. On the accession of His Majesty the count's friends mailed a protest upon the doors of the village church.

Oxygen to Make the Hair Grow.

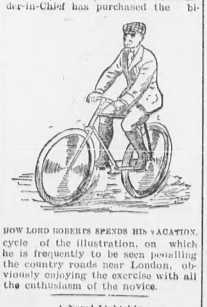

The use of gas to make the hair grow is one of the latest medical discoveries. The gas employed is oxygen. A large cap fits tightly around the head and is supplied with oxygen from a bag which is slung over the patient's shoulders. It is worn for a few hours every day and even in cases of absolute baldness is said to produce a more or less luxuriant crop of hair.

The discovery was made at the Oxygen Hospital, London. The gas is used for the cure of quite a number of diseases. A woman was undergoing the oxygen cure for skin disease, and one of her arms had for many years been placed in a light airtight box filled with the gas. It was soon noticed that on that part of the arm that was unaffected by the disease, the growth of hair was much stimulated, and this naturally suggested oxygen as a cure for baldness.

The first experiment was made upon a woman who had completely lost her hair, and it was found that after a few weeks' treatment there was quite a strong growth.

cycle of the illustration, on which he is frequently to be seen pedalling the country roads near London, obviously enjoying the exercise with all the enthusiasm of the novice.

A Novel Lightship.

A new departure in lightships, it appears, is about to be inaugurated at Otter Rock, Italy. The ship is to have no crew and is to be worked by the compound gas system. Two large gas holders built upon it will contain as much gas as will light the lantern for several months. As the gas escapes from the holders to the lantern it operates a mechanism by which a bell placed in a belfry on the deck is rung. These rocks mark a particularly dangerous part of the coast, and the experiment will be watched with much interest.

IN ROYAL PARTY IN CANADA

TITLED MEN AND WOMEN WITH THE DUKE AND DUCHESS.

His Royal Highness the Duke of Cornwall and York's Full Official Title—The Ladies of the Party—Duke's Equerry Is the Son of a Canadian—The Duchess' Brother.

Who's who in the royal party, now touring in Canada?

Of the Duke and Duchess Canadians are well informed, but it would not be out of place to give him his official title. Here is how it goes:

"His Royal Highness Prince George, Frederic Ernest Albert, Duke of Cornwall and York, Duke of Rothesay, Prince of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha and Duke of Saxony, Earl of Carrick and Inverness, Baron of Renfrew and Killarney, Lord of the Isles and Great Steward of Scotland, K. G., P. C., K. T., K. P., G. C. M. G., G. C. V. O., LL. D., D. C. L."

The Duke is England's royal sailor, and he has all the bronze of a man who faces wind and weather on sea. He is fair, and bronzes as a fair man does—ruddy hue. He is browned to the eyebrows, and his hands and wrists show the effects of exposure. He is a light-boned fellow of just above average height. He has small feet and hands, and moves with a wiry, springy stride of excellent health. He is not a powerful man, but he is agile and graceful. His Royal Highness would probably tip the scales at 150 pounds.

The Duchess resembles the Duke in build, complexion, and carriage. They are nearly of a height, about five feet eight inches, but the Duchess is the more composed of the two in public. During the reading of a recent address, His Royal Highness fidgetted continually with his hands. First the gray-gloved extremities were clasped across the body, and then he shifted one behind his back and clenched the other or touched back a hair he imagined astray on his forehead. When his hands had settled down he became uneasy on his feet and shifted from one foot to the other.

The Duchess, on the contrary, watched the proceedings with evident interest. The Duke was attired in conventional attire, black throughout, with the exception of gray suede gloves. His only jewelry beyond a carven finger ring was a diamond scarf pin. The Duchess also appeared entirely in black. The flash of brilliant diamonds in watch-chain and corsage broach and her snappy eyes alone relieved the monotony of the sombre mourning color. The most important figure in the household of the Duke is Lady Mary Lygon, one of the Duchess' oldest friends, and her lady-in-waiting ever since she married. Lady Lygon is a sister of Earl Beauchamp, one of England's most prominent peers, who was at one time Mayor of Worcester. Madresfield Court, Malvern Link, the Beauchamp country seat, is the finest residence in Worcestershire. Lady Lygon is the most graceful dancer in the whole entourage. She is 32 years of age, the eldest of two sisters, one of whom is married to Lord Ampthill, the private secretary of Joseph Chamberlain, for Lord Cole is an accomplished actress herself.

The position of Hon. Mrs. Derek Keppel is a peculiar one. Her husband has gone on leaving her for seven and a half months, and so she was included in the party. She is affectionately called the supernumerary of the party. On England's shores remained the hope of the Keppel household, a baby. The Hon. Mrs. Keppel was Hon. Bridget Harbord before she entered the bonds of matrimony, the youngest daughter of the King's Lord of the Bedchamber, Lord Suffield, who was also lord-in-waiting to her late Majesty. Lord Suffield was chief of staff for the Prince of Wales during his visit to India. The "supernumerary" is a sister to Lady Hastings, Lady Musgrave, and Lady Carrington.

The Hon. Derek Keppel, the Duke of Cornwall's equerry, is a brother of the Earl of Albermarle and one of the beaus of London. His mother was a daughter of Sir Allen Napier McNab. The Duke's equerry is a remarkably handsome man, and his uniforms fit him so well that he almost puts the Duke of Cornwall in the shade. By the way, the naval uniform the Duke wears fits His Royal Highness like a glove does the hand. It really seems as if it would be impossible to release His Highness from the embrace of that uniform without slitting the main seams.

Hon. Derek Keppel, as he appeared at the ceremonies at Quebec the other day, was the most gorgeous figure in the parade, not even excepting Governor-General Jette in famous ride green and gold. The Duke's equerry was a sunburst of gold and crimson, the most striking figure in the parade. Lord Wenlock is another man who is striking because of his good looks. He is a brother of Sir Arthur Lawley, and was Governor of Madras for five years.

The brother of the Duchess of Cornwall, Captain Prince Alexander of Teck, is also of the party. He is 27 years of age, and served through the Matabele war, and only returned from South Africa last December. Lieut. Sir Charles Cust, another of the equerries, has been with the Duke of York nine years, and he is a sailor to the backbone, and has served, man and boy, on the Britannia, Newcastle, Achilles, Carosport, Rodney, Crescent, and royal yacht Osborne.

The royal chaplain, Rev. J. A. Dalton, is canon of St. George's Chapel, Windsor. He was an officer in Queen Victoria's household, and was one of the three divines who held the final services over the remains of the Queen at Frogmore, and he was tutor to Prince Albert and Prince George of Wales, and he is over 60 years of age.

Sir Arthur Bigge, the Duke's private secretary, acted in the same capacity for Queen Victoria. He was through the Zulu war.

The commander of the first-class battleship Niobe is Captain Denison, formerly of the royal yacht Osborne, a brother of Lieut.-Col. Geo. T. Denison of Toronto.

GEMS FOR THE DUCHESS.

Among Them a Large Canadian Pearl Set in Canadian Gold.

Three hundred and sixty-six pure, flawless diamonds, a large Canadian pearl of rare beauty, set in a corsage brooch of Canadian gold beaten and enamelled into a perfect counterpart of a spray of Canadian maple leaves, was the gift of the ladies of Montreal to the Duchess of York. The ornament is a marvel of the jeweler's art. The spray of six maple leaves measures almost four and a half inches in length. No two leaves are alike in size or shape. All have been modelled and enamelled directly from nature, and are as perfect imitations of Canada's national emblem as the most highly skilled workmanship could produce. Around the edge of each leaf beaded fifty and sixty diamonds are embedded in the gold, while in each case the junction of leaf and branch is formed of a diamond larger and more beautiful than the others. Every stone has been specially selected and cut. The pearl, which is set at the start of the spray, weighs 36 grains, and is perhaps the most perfect Canadian pearl that has ever found its way into a brooch. It was found in the lake St. John district of Quebec, where some fine jewels from time to time reward the tireless searches. The brooch reposed in a handsome chest of solid silver nearly eight inches square. Upon its lid was carved a wreath of maple leaves encircling the arms of Montreal. A suitable inscription is engraved upon another part of the chest. With the exception of the diamonds, which have not yet been found in Canada, in any abundance, everything connected with the gift is purely Canadian.

GREEN SICKNESS OR CHLOROSIS

Just at the threshold of Womanhood, that trying period when the whole system is undergoing a complete change, many a girl falls a victim to Chlorosis or Green Sickness. Her disposition changes and she becomes morose, despondent and melancholy. The appetite is changeable, digestion imperfect and weariness and fatigue are experienced on the slightest exertion. Blondes become pallid, waxy and puffy ; brunettes become muddy and grayish in color, with bluish black rings under the eyes.

Examination shows a remarkable decrease in the quality of the blood. Iron and such other restoratives as are admirably combined in Dr. Chase's Nerve Food are demanded by the system. The regular and persistent use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cannot fail to benefit any girl or young woman suffering from Chlorosis, feminine irregularities or weaknesses resulting from poor blood or exhausted nerves. It reconstructs wasted tissue, gives color to the cheeks and new vitality to every organ of the body.

CHRONIC DERANGEMENTS OF THE STOMACH, LIVER AND BLOOD are speedily removed by the active principle of the ingredients entering into the composition of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills. These pills act specifically on the deranged organs, stimulating to action the dormant energies of the system, thereby removing disease and renewing life and vitality to the afflicted. In this lies the great secret of the popularity of Parmelee's Vegetable pills.

CONSUMPTIVE PEOPLE

CAN SECURE RENEWED HEALTH AND STRENGTH.

The Rich, Red Blood Made by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Gives New Strength to Every Nerve, Fibre and Organ of the Body.

From The Budget, Shelburne, N.S.

Among the young ladies of Shelburne, there is none today who more fully bears the impress of perfect health than Miss Lilian Durfee. Unfortunately this was not always the case, as a few years ago Miss Durfee became ill, and her friends feared that she was going into decline. A doctor was called in and prescribed but his medicines did not have the desired effect. Her strength gradually left her, her appetite failed, she had frequent headaches, was very pale, and finally grew so weak that a walk of a few rods would completely fatigue her. The young lady's family sorrowfully observed that she was steadily failing, and feared that consumption would claim her as a victim. One day a friend urged that she should give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a trial, but the idea at first was not favorably entertained; it seemed hopeless to expect that any medicine would help her after the doctor's treatment had failed. However, this good friend still urged, and finally prevailed. By the time the third box was used, there was an unmistakable improvement in Miss Durfee's condition. Cheered by this, the pills were continued, and in the course of a few weeks the former invalid, whose strength was taxed by the slightest exertion, was almost restored to health. The use of the pills was still continued and a few weeks more found Miss Durfee again enjoying perfect health.

To a reporter who interviewed her, she said:—"I believe that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills saved my life, and I earnestly recommend them to all who fear that consumption has laid its grasp upon them."

That the facts related above are not in any way exaggerated, is borne out by the following statement from Robt. G. Irwin, Esq., the well known stipendiary magistrate for the municipality, who says:—"I distinctly remember the pale face of Miss Lillian Durfee and the regrets of friends as they expressed their conviction that she would soon be compelled to say farewell to earth. Miss Durfee, however, carries the unmistakable credentials of good health, and frequently expresses her indebtedness to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

Pale and anaemic girls, or young people with consumptive tendencies, will find renewed health and bodily vigor through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills are an unfailing cure for all diseases due to a watery condition of the blood, or shattered nerves. Sold by all dealers in medicine or sent postpaid on receipt of 50c a box, or $2.50 for six boxes, by addressing the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

To tell the plain truth, when a woman goes away on a trip her husband isn't as lonesome as the cat.

There never was, and never will be, a universal panacea, in one remedy, for all ills to which flesh is heir—the very nature of many curatives being such that were the germs of other and differently seated diseases rooted in the system of the patient—what would relieve one ill in turn would aggravate the other. We have, however, in Quinine Wine, when obtainable in a sound, unadulterated state, a remedy for many and grievous ills. By its gradual and judicious use the frailest systems are led into convalescence and strength by the influence which Quinine exerts on nature's own restoratives. It relieves the drooping spirits of those with whom a chronic state of morbid despondency and lack of interest in life is a disease, and by tranquilising the nerves, disposes to sound and refreshing sleep—imparts vigor to the action of the blood, which, being stimulated, courses throughout the veins, strengthening the healthy animal functions of the system, thereby making activity a necessary result, strengthening the frame, and giving life to the digestive organs, which naturally demand increased substance—result, improved appetite. Northrop & Lyman, of Toronto have given to the public their superior Quinine Wine at the usual rate, and, ranged by the opinion of scientists, this wine approaches nearest perfection of any in the market. All druggists sell it.

A Peculiar Present.

Edward Noyes Westcott, known only as the author of "David Harum," possessed a rich baritone voice and at one time sang in a choir at Syracuse. He was fond of telling of an occasion on which he was invited to sing at a concert in one of the smaller towns of western New York. The musical affair passed off satisfactorily with the help of the neighboring talent, assisted by Mr. Westcott's rare voice.

As Mr. Westcott was about to retire his host came timidly to his room, carrying two long paper boxes. "I leave the house so early in the morning to go to my factory," the man explained, "that I'm afraid I may not see you, but I want to give you something for your singing tonight. Now, here's two pairs of the very best whaleboned corsets that our factory turns out, and I want you to take them home with you."

Westcott used to add that he was so surprised and amused that he could find no words of protest, and so accepted and took them home.

Chinese Nerve.

The most common form of putting a man to death in China is taking off the head by the sword, and the extraordinary nerve of the Chinese is shown in this way more than any other. I have seen two men beheaded, one placed before the other. It took three strokes of the sword to kill the first, and while the operation was going on the second knelt down with his neck outstretched waiting his turn. Thinking that the process was slow, he turned to the executioner and asked if he were going to be much longer with the first. Then, when the executioner came to him, he stretched his neck and waited for the blow, which completely severed his head from his body.

A Dead Whale.

A whaling station can be smelled a long distance. It is a wonder how people can endure such awful odors, but it is true that one can get used to anything. The excursion steamers to the North Cape always visit a whaling station for the edification of the tourists. It is one of the sights on the regular programme, but few people go ashore. The others are satisfied to remain afar off and spend the time "chinning" the captain and begging him to get away as soon as possible. A dead whale will smell longer and louder than any known animal.—Norway Letter to Chicago Herald.

A CLIPPING FROM PLATTSVILLE ECHO

MRS. J. BARNETT FIGURES IN AN INTERESTING ARTICLE IN THE LOCAL PAPER.

Interviewed by the Representative of the Echo—Story of Her Trouble as Related by Herself—Her Opinion of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Plattsville, Ont., Oct. 21.—(Special)—The case of Mrs. J. Barnett of this town was found of sufficient importance to be published at length in the Plattsville Echo. To the representative of that live local paper she made the following statement concerning her experience with Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I have been ailing for years, but in the spring of last year I grew very much worse. The symptoms of my disease were neuralgia, rheumatism in the left arm, pains in the small of the back, up the spinal column and back of the head, through the eyes, left side of the body and occasionally the right side.

"I grew weak, for I had no appetite and night after night I could not sleep. I was a physical wreck. I was treated by doctors, but their medicines afforded me no relief. I chanced to read in Dodd's Almanac of the virtue in Dodd's Kidney Pills and the wonderful cures effected by them.

"The symptoms as therein explained corresponded with my own, and I started taking Dodd's Kidney Pills according to directions. Before I had finished one box there was a decided improvement in my condition. My appetite returned, the pain was lessened and I was able to sleep. I have taken in all twelve boxes and have completely recovered. No sign of my old trouble remains, and I ascribe it solely to Dodd's Kidney Pills. Dodd's Kidney Pills are a wonderful discovery."

This clipping is reproduced as it is typical of the way so many women feel about Dodd's Kidney Pills Dodd's Kidney Pills have been often truly called "Woman's best friend."

HAD LA GRIPPE.—Mr. A. REQUIRES LITTLE SLEEP.

The distinction among animals of requiring least sleep belongs to the elephant. In spite of his capacity for hard work, the elephant seldom, if ever, sleeps more than four, or occasionally five, hours.

Man and His Palate.

I suppose that every man's dream of married life is more or less mixed up with the idea of food—food that he can eat and can invite his friends to eat. The possibilities of the chafing dish are innumerable. Try your best not to fall into a hopeless rut. Do dainty cooking. Then some time it may be that the fragrance of a perfect Welsh rabbit will bring to your mind the first budding of love as long as life and as deep as the grave. Men are queer creatures, aren't they?

Her Usual Remark.

"What did Maime say when her father gave her that new gold watch?" asked one gladsome girl.

"Oh, the same thing that she always says. She remarked that she was having a perfectly lovely time."

A Used Up One.

Nubbs—He went into the editor's office like a roaring lion and came out like a postage stamp.

Bubbs—How was that?

Nubbs—Licked.

Bad Operation.

Sawyer—I hadn't heard of it. Surgical, of course?

Boynton—No, this was a financial operation. Gibbons borrowed $10 of him yesterday.—Boston Transcript.

Street Corner Civilities.

"Well," said the blind man, grasping his cane and starting on, "I'll see you again."

"Let me hear from you occasionally," said the deaf and dumb man cordially.—Chicago Tribune.

If some people were to weigh every word they utter it would be decidedly tough on the scales.
